

Coronavirus jab: pregnancy

Pregnancy and the coronavirus jab

If you're pregnant, it is safe for you to have the coronavirus jab. The jab will not harm you or your baby. If you have any questions about the jab, call your doctor or midwife.

Are you trying to get pregnant?

If you are trying to get pregnant, contact your doctor or gynaecologist to ask when would be a good time to have the coronavirus jab.

Breastfeeding

The medicine in the coronavirus jab won't harm your baby and doesn't find its way into breastmilk. A lot of research has been done on this, and you can breastfeed as normal.

Questions

To watch a video on this subject, go to corona.steffie.nl.

If you still have questions, call 0800 1351 (no additional costs).

